A Dull Scholar.

The words he was up for the fifth time on the charge of children reading. This time the magistrate decided to appeal to the boy's father.

"Now, son, here, Ah," said he to the father, "this boy of yours has been up in court so many times for reading children that I'm tired of seeing him here."

"Ah, don't blame you, sah," returned the father. "Ah's tired of seeing him here, too."

"Then why don't you teach him how to act? Show him the right way, and he won't be coming here."

"Ah has showed 'im de right way, sah," declared the old man, earnestly. "Ah has showed 'im de right way, but he somehow keeps gettin' caught again." "Way did you do, child?"

—Philadelphia Record.

Lack of Appreciation.

Casey, becoming wealthy, invited some of his old friends to dinner. After dinner Casey passed around the cigars. They were big, fat, black cigars, that cost him ten cents each.

"Humph, taking his cigar, but about half of it off and flung the other half in lighting it."

"Man, man," said Casey. "What are you after? Didn't I tell you? These are the best cigars. I have to pay an appreciation of a few cigars?"

"The first 'un," replied Hugh, as he chewed off another end of his cigar. "I've been smoking a pipe as long as I can tell the difference between a five and a ten." —Pittsburgh Chronicle-Telegraph.

He Was Shown.

A Hiawatha man got on a crowded coach. Another man was holding a seat with two traveling girls.

"I'd like to move those 'olasses," said the Hiawatha man.

"I'd like to see you," said the boy. The Hiawatha man moved them.

"Did you see me?" he said.

"Yes," said the boy.

"Is that all?" asked the Hiawatha man.

"Yes, that's all," replied the boy. —Kansas City Journal.

A Baseball Fatality.

A baseball enthusiast took his wife to the ball game. That night the "fan" was awakened from his slumber by his better half shouting in her dreams: "KOH, the umpire!"

"Hull avore he's wakin' out of bed, and is dinin in knocked over the washstand. The coach awoke Mrs. 'Fan.' 'Did you kill the umpire, John?' she inquired.

"No," replied John angrily. "But I reminded the pitcher—Babeus Magnus."

Indispensable Qualification.

Caller—"My uncle died yesterday, and I want you to officiate at the funeral."

Dr. Jones—"But I didn't know him."

Caller—"Good! You're just the man I want!"

Fight Talk Settled.

"We don't hear any more about the Italian States scrapping."

"I understand the Italian States have been officially notified that they will have to put up a fight before getting any more free advertising."

—Louisville Courier-Journal.

He Found Out.

A beefy English officer, being sent off to an elderly scoundrel at a dinner, leaned over and said:

"Who's that fat old hipopotamus at a woman's elbow?"

"That's my wife," was the reply.

"Thanks," said the officer, heartily.

"Thanks. That's all I wanted to know."

And he turned to his neighbor on the other side and whispered, with a chuckle:

"That wall out of that, I think, sir."

Mental Powers

Be Accurate in All Small Details

By JOHN A. BOWLAND

U NACCURATE information in a general sense is responsible for more troubles in business and in more devious ways than almost any other one source of annoyances. In this, too, I am warning the more serious phases which wreck established institutions. Much of every-day knowledge of business is based on mere "information" and in vital moves naturally the "information" may run on otherwise solid establishment. I met in the office of a business house the other day, when a man came in to see the head of the department about a matter that was in dispute. The head of the department, listening to a statement, explained that he knew absolutely nothing about the matter, but said that if his caller would go to a certain room on the second floor the manager of the department there would be glad to take up the matter with him.

"But," protested the caller, "they sent me up here!"

"Who sent you up here?" asked the official.

"Well, I don't know," admitted the caller, "but it was a young man down in the office on the first floor"—still in a challenging tone of voice.

Not till the manager had added considerably more of pointed denunciations to his directions as final did the caller leave in the direction of the right office for his complaint.

Recently the young man in the general reception room, lacking information of where to send such complaints, had made the mistake. The complaint, following directions and finding that he was being shifted somewhere else, had grown indignant. His grievance was bigger than it was when he first started up with it.

There are men at the head of departments of business who by nature or through the pressure of business cares are short and curt in their dealings with employees. In giving a direction or answering a query they may show a degree of impatience that makes the employee nervous. He doesn't hear as well as he would if the tone were full of amiability; he doesn't have all his wits in control for the logical assembling of the things he does hear. He goes away nervous and uncertain, and when he begins to put his directions into working order he discovers that he doesn't know just what he has been asked to do.

This brings up to the young man preparing for business the necessity for his cultivating a quick wit and understanding based on common sense.

"I never have to tell that fellow anything twice."

Thousands of times a day men in responsible positions pay this tribute to the sidewalk, capable man whose mental powers are under ready command. Such a man concentrates his attention. He can hear and he can grasp the substance of what he hears. He is prepared to act the moment that he has received instructions from his superior. This keenness of wit in working order always promises that the man possesses of it may escape the handicap of misinformation in general. And the world is full of misinformation of all kinds which is passing current every day among the unthinking.

Horses that Need Warm Blankets

By MRS. STELLA MOREY

With winter upon us, storms, and often blizzards, the mercury hogging the zero mark, many horses need for commercial purposes are not blanketed.

The chief sufferers are the horses on some grocery and delivery wagons and those belonging to milk dealers, laundries and the like.

Often we see a driver supplied with a blanket throw it at the horse rather than take trouble to put it on. The horse cannot speak and the driver doesn't care.

Many horses drawing the mail-collecting wagons are not blanketed.

The garbage wagons, laden with all sorts of heavy loads, stop every three or five minutes to collect stuff and the poor beasts usually wear no blankets.

One driver said, "They get used to it." Is that so?

The horse that is exposed to frigid elements all day needs a blanket. The only practical blanket is the one put on under the harness.

The company or firm that provides blankets for its horses has less to charge in the loss of horses than the firm that neglects the horse; for a horse will endure longer service if humanely covered.

The remedy for this neglect is for every woman to notify the grocer, milkman, laundryman and vegetable man that unless they blanket their horses on stormy days they need not stop at her door. This would bring a neighbor of gratitude from many suffering horses.

The horses on coal and garbage wagons should be attended to by the proper authorities. While we are urging that humane ideas be taught in the public schools let us see to it that humanity is practiced on the streets.

Model City of South Africa

By WILLIAM HINDS of Johannesburg

In all the years that I have lived in South Africa I have never known a case where our public officials were suspected of corruption. We don't know the meaning of the word graft as you use it in the United States.

With us a "graft" is a man of great energy—one who accomplishes things.

We have a mayor and council in Johannesburg, but they serve for the honor of their office and to promote the public good.

No man connected with our local municipal government in any important capacity gets a salary.

Times are dreadfully slow with us, but the outlook is for improvement.

Your slump in the United States had its effect here in our people part of the world and helped aggravate our bad.

The diamond mines of Kimberley, which have the United States as their best customer, closed down on the bigger part of their operations. Our gold mines are still producing heavily, but while they give employment to many they do little to create a general prosperity.

MINES AND MINING

The Missouri mine near Murray, Idaho, owned largely by E. P. Spaulding of Spokane, in shipping a car of high grade galena ore to the smelter every week.

Despite the continued cold weather and the prevalence of two feet of snow in the hills, the rush in the new Idaho gold camp in Idaho is said to be on. Fully 200 people are in the district already.

Bolton returns of the Round Mountain Mining company for the month of December show that the company's mill extracted during the month, 2,546.25 ounces of bullion, worth approximately $15,500.

The December production of the Butte district was reduced nearly to per cent because of the strike of railroad switchmen, which prevented the transportation of ore from many mines and fuel to others.

The trial run of a new mill, employing a leaching process, is to be made in the next few days by a syndicate headed by George P. Timmons of Washington, D. C., which is operating on Green River, near Utah.

Heavy transactions in Illinois Consolidated recently have given rise to a report in the east, said to be well founded, that in some way the Illinois, as well as Nevada Consolidated, is to be included in the Utah Copper merger.

A correspondent writes the Silver State from Chalpy, Nevada, saying: "The town of Chalpy is just about all gone now, as the mine is shut down and hasn't paid for three months back. The men are about to attack for their salaries."

During the past year the Goldfield Consolidated Mines company properties produced 194,479.67 tons of ore, of an average value of $17.85 per ton, or $3,470,410.07 gross, from which it realized a recovery of $2.20 per cent or net returns of $4,232,632.46.

R. B. Staley of Montpelier and C. E. Heckman of Boise are the only two living railroad engineers in Idaho when the Oregon Short Line Railroad company has been organized, under the provisions of a resolution of the board of directors, passed six years ago.

According to statistics on file in the office of the state statistician, there are about 2,200 coal miners employed in the mines near Price, Utah, and the average daily wage is more than $3, making the total payroll more than $12,000 a day, or about $300,000 a month.

Highly favorable ore developments in the Silver State, copper property and one billion enclosed property at Good Springs, are reported. The new show of ore recently encountered in the Ninety-Nine is opening larger, it is said, as is a strike of high-grade ore in the Butte.

Continued improvement of conditions in the slope from the Le Roy tunnel of the Silver Island Coalition Mines company is reported by miners from that camp. As the slope is pushed further into the hill, they say, the ore body becomes larger and the ore is denser and richer.

The old board of directors of the Utah Mines Coal company, near Alta, Utah, are in the effort to get the strike of high-grade ore made during the holidays is widening out in good shape, and that indications are strong or then over that the find will develop into a large deposit of first-class ore.

White Pine county should get at least two new producers of importance this year outside the Elly district and a couple more within, to swell the splendid total of value of its bullion output. Look for her at the front in the Nevada list at the beginning of 1911, says the White Pine News of Elly, Nevada.

The senate has passed a bill offered by Senator Heyburn appropriating $7,500 and making it immediately available "to enable the secretary of the interior to complete the classification and appropriation of lands within the Coeur d'Alene Indian reservation. The action to be taken from the proceeds of sales of agricultural lands."

The supreme court sustains the constitutionality of the act of the territorial legislature, approved December 20, 1900, creating the independent school district of Laramie, holding that the district can issue bonds in the sum of $15,000 for the purchase of three tracts of land in different sections of the school district and for erecting and furnishing three school buildings thereon.

While the men who are responsible for the bringing together of the old producing mines of Blackfoot, Idaho, into one corporation, known as the Idaho Consolidated Mines company, intend that plans for operating the properties have not yet been perfected, it is not to be doubted that the strong interests in control will speed the plans for an active campaign of development and production.

Barley, Idaho, people who formed a syndicate a few weeks ago for acquiring water rights in Fairbridge, Idaho, and for taking it to the district, were defeated at week when (the syndicate) learned that city of Fairbridge had already made an agreement with the district.

Neither government records nor other known records tell of a deposit of graphite anywhere in the world which compares in size and richness with that of the Humber Mining company, in Three-mile canyon, near Perry, Box Elder county, Utah.

Answer This Question

When shown positive and reliable proof that a certain remedy had cured numerous cases of female ill, wouldn't any sensible woman conclude that the same remedy would also benefit her if suffering with the same trouble?

Here are two letters which prove the efficiency of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Fitchville, Ohio.—"My daughter was all run down, suffered from pains in her side, head and limbs, and could walk but a short distance at a time. She came very near having nervous prostration, had begun to cough a good deal, and seemed melancholy by spells. She tried two doctors but got little help. Since taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, Blood Purifier and Liver Pills she has improved so much that she feels and looks like another girl."—Mrs. C. Cole, Fitchville, Ohio.

Irassburg, Vermont.—"I feel it my duty to say a few words in praise of your medicine. When I began taking it I had been very sick with kidney and bladder troubles and nervous prostration. I am now taking the sixth bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and feel myself greatly improved. My friends who call to see me have noticed a great change."—Mrs. A. H. Sanborn, Irassburg, Vermont.

We will pay a handsome reward to any person who will prove to us that these letters are not genuine and truthful—or that either of these women were paid in any way for their testimonials, or that the letters are published without their permission, or that the original letter from each did not come to us entirely unsolicited.

What more proof can any one ask?
